Alicia is a skilled litigator with substantial experience representing clients in state and federal court in a variety of matters, including premises liability, breach of warranty, construction and automobile liability and complex product liability cases, often involving catastrophic injuries and complicated theories of liability.

She has also done significant work representing municipalities and school districts in a broad range of matters. Alicia has tried numerous hearings and cases relating to truancy, expulsion and student discipline, tax assessment appeals and other governmental matters. She also has experience drafting municipal ordinances and board resolutions, analyzing school district risk management and avoidance issues, and handling insurance coverage, civil rights and Right-to-Know Law matters.

In addition, Alicia has experience in alternative dispute resolutions, including arbitrations and mediations.
