David focuses on government contracts litigation, with an emphasis on matters involving large, complex federal construction claims.

His experience spans bid protests, claims and disputes including matters before the Government Accountability Office (GAO), the various Boards of Contract Appeals, the U.S. Court of Federal Claims (COFC), the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, various state courts, and in binding arbitration and mediation. David also represents companies in general civil litigation, internal investigations, and related formal and informal disputes. He frequently advises clients on federal, state and local regulatory and compliance issues. David's deep and extensive e-discovery experience provides significant value to clients navigating the increasingly complex electronic discovery process. He maintains an active U.S. Top Secret Security clearance.

David publishes and speaks on a variety of legal issues, especially federal and state procurement litigation and bid protests.

Before Fox Rothschild

David was a summer associate at Fox Rothschild and clerked in the firm's Washington DC office during his third year of law school. He also gained experience in procurement matters including bid protests, contract administration, and specialized procurement contracts as a legal intern at the Transportation Security Administration, Office of the Chief Counsel. In law school, David was a member of the Public Contract Law Journal and a case screener for the Mid-Atlantic Innocence Project.

Beyond Fox Rothschild

David is particularly passionate about eviction prevention and currently serves as the Chair and as a Public Interest Representative on the Tenant-Landlord Commission of Arlington County, VA, an advisory body to the Arlington County Board providing guidance and hearing a wide range of issues.
