Before Fox Rothschild

Emily's commitment to helping her clients achieve business success stems from her first-hand understanding of the daily interplay between law and business. Prior to launching her legal career, Emily co-founded and served as lead teacher of an inner city Montessori school in Boston and as the executive director of a nonprofit early childhood education center in Massachusetts.

Emily also worked as an instructor at University of Pennsylvania, where she taught undergraduate English and completed coursework toward a Ph.D. in English.

During law school at USC School of Law, Emily was a research assistant for Dean Karen Lash, where she researched and analyzed the practical and legal implications of methods for providing legal services to low-income clients in California. She also served as an articles editor and staff member of the Southern California Law Review. After graduating law school, Emily worked as a judicial law clerk for the Honorable George H. King of the U.S. District Court for the Central District of California.

Beyond Fox Rothschild

Emily serves as president of the Los Angeles Venture Association (LAVA). In 2011, she founded Women in LAVA, a strategic interest group focused on the specific needs of women entrepreneurs who are seeking seed or venture financing.

Additionally, Emily has served as an adjunct professor at University of Southern California Law School, teaching a course on contract drafting and negotiation.

Client Resources

Emily is a former co-editor of Emerging Companies Insider, a Fox blog that focuses on developments in the law affecting startup and emerging growth companies and their investors. Topics covered in the blog include choice of entity, shareholders' agreements, issuance of equity to employees, preparing for and executing a capital raise, exit strategies and the JOBS Act and its impact on how companies can and should raise capital from investors.
