Kristen centers her practice on complex litigation, with an emphasis on class action, antitrust and mass torts. She also has substantial experience advising clients on complying with U.S. and international regulations, consumer protection issues, data privacy matters and technology management.

An experienced litigator, Kristen has represented clients as plaintiffs and defendants before federal and state courts and before the Federal Trade Commission. Her clients span a number of industries, including health care, payment card, construction and residential mortgage appraisal.

Representative Experience

- Served on trial team in the Eastern District of Louisiana successful in proving hundreds of millions of dollars in damage to a class of homeowners throughout the United States.
- Represented producers of honey in class action against honey packers resulting in multimillion-dollar class action settlement.
- Represented class of victims of apartheid in South Africa in proceedings in the Southern District of New York, and drafted appeals before the Second Circuit Court of Appeals, and petition for certiorari before the U.S. Supreme Court.
- Represented state professional board in antitrust action before the Federal Trade Commission, which raised novel issues under the state action doctrine.
- Represented national and international retailers in antitrust class action against credit card companies.
- Represented government contractor in multi-million dollar action in the Eastern District of Virginia alleging violations of the Lanham Act.
- Drafted amicus briefs on behalf of industry association filed before the Supreme Court and other federal circuit courts regarding issues of, inter alia, interpretation of the Telephone Consumer Protection Act and Fair Debt Collection Practices Act.
