Linda's practice focuses on complex multi-party litigation and environmental law in major environmental cases in the state and federal courts, with a particular emphasis in:

- CERCLA and Spill Act liability
- private cost recovery
- toxic torts
- environmental aspects of transactions
- natural resource damages

She represents companies identified by the USEPA or other governmental agencies as:

- potentially responsible parties in connection with federal and state hazardous waste sites
- defendants in private lawsuits for toxic torts and property damage resulting from exposure to hazardous materials

Linda is a former co-chair of the firm's Women Initiative and a past member of the Partnership Advancement Committee.

Before Fox Rothschild
