Marc is a member of the litigation team practicing in the firm's Raleigh office. He advises and represents clients in state and federal court in a diverse range of litigation matters, including transportation, business disputes, insurance coverage and personal injury matters.

Leveraging his litigation experience, Marc works with clients to address problems and to develop strategies to prevent, manage and resolve disputes. As the leader of the firm's Transportation & Logistics Practice, he advises clients concerning risk management, business structure and organization, regulatory compliance and various other issues that confront companies in the transportation industry.

He is actively involved in numerous transportation industry organizations and regularly presents seminars to transportation industry clients on safety issues, best practices and conducting accident response investigations.

Marc also regularly represents clients in real estate-related litigation, including eminent domain proceedings. Additionally, he works with clients in the renewable energy sector to obtain rezonings, special use and conditional permits, and variances, often appearing before local governments.

In addition, Marc is an active member of the firm's Privacy & Data Security Practice, assisting clients with the management and protection of sensitive personal and business data. He also advises clients in identifying, evaluating and managing first- and third-party data privacy and security risks under ever-changing federal and state laws. In the context of data breach and cybersecurity preparedness, Marc works to help ensure a client's policies, procedures and cyber crisis response plans are appropriate. Marc is a frequent speaker on data security and data breach response issues.
