Skylar works closely with her clients – both in and out of the courtroom – to help them avoid and solve their workplace conflicts. She represents clients of all sizes throughout the Pacific Northwest in a variety of industries, including health care, manufacturing, public higher education, retail, recreation and leisure, food and beverage, electric utility construction and aerospace. Throughout all stages, Skylar strives to identify practical solutions to meet her clients' business needs.

Her practice includes advising clients on:

- Workplace policies and handbooks
- Discrimination
- Harassment
- Accommodations
- Retaliation
- Wrongful discharge
- Investigations
- Leaves of absence
- Wage and hour compliance
- Washington Industrial Safety and Health Act (WISHA) compliance
- Drafting and enforcement of employment agreements
- Various HR- and workplace-related concerns

Skylar frequently provides training to employers relating to topics such as effective and lawful management, discrimination and harassment – all of which focuses on fostering a respectful work environment. She is also a frequent speaker on employment topics, including developments with state and local laws relating to paid sick and safe leaves, minimum wages and consideration of conviction and arrest records.

In addition to her HR advice practice, Skylar regularly defends employers in litigation in state and federal courts and in agency charges before the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) and Washington State Human Rights Commission (WSHRC), as well as litigating noncompete matters. She has secured trial victories and dismissals for her clients in cases involving claims of discrimination, harassment, retaliation, failure-to-accommodate, wrongful discharge, military discrimination under USERRA and state law and wage and hour claims.
